The Lampard Family Report

Direct Descendants of John Lampard

The Lampard Family

Origins of the name

The surname Lampard has two possible derivations, the first is from the village of Lamport in Northamptonshire, and the second, and much more common derivation is from the Christian name of “Lambert” which became very popular in England after the Norman Conquest and through the middle ages. Because of this the name is far more widespread in the southern counties of England especially around the counties of London and Wiltshire.

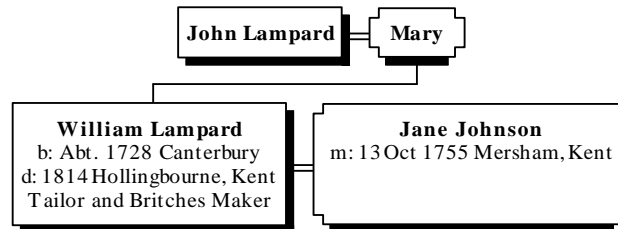

Frank’s ancestors are first found in the London and Kent areas, and their surname was most likely be derived from “Lambert” rather than any other derivation.
